Table of Contents: This section contains information about the Chicago Manual of Style method of formatting and citing documents. These resources follow the 17th edition of the Chicago Manual of Style, published in 2017. The title of a site that is analogous to traditional printed work but that does not have (and has never had) a printed counterpart can be treated as titles of websites, rather than as conventional encyclopedias. This is a difference from previous editions of OMOS. Website titles should follow title-style capitalization and are usually in Roman, without quotation marks. Sections of a website such as a specific heading, a single page, a single blog entry, etc. should be written in Roman with quotes. There are, however, a few exceptions: book titles are written in italics and the titles of books, manuscripts, television programs, films and other types of works should be treated in the same way, regardless of whether they are mentioned on paper or online. For example, when you mention the website of CNN, the title keeps italics. In addition, in cases like this, where a website does not have a distinctive title, it can be cited based on who is responsible for the site. For example CNN online. If you have any questions about the Romanesque or Italic, the Romanesh AÖi is the safest choice! Authors for web sources: The author of a part of web content often is not immediately clear. If a name is given, use it as in any other source. If the contents A i published with a screen, internet handle or pseudonym, and the real name of author not A i available, use this instead of the author's name. A you can also use the name of publishing when the web page does not have a listed but is associated with some sort of company, association or professional group. When the author of a web page cannot be determined and there is no clear publication simply list the title first. Use the first letter of the first word of the title that is not an article (i.e., "a", "an" or "the") to determine the alphabetical order of the item in the bibliography. So, for example, if the title of the page is "Guide to Cooking Apple Cakes", "C" should be considered the first letter for literacy purposes. Dates for Web Sources: If the cited source has a clear release date, use it as the source date; many websites will note when they were last modified, modified or revised. If you are using a revision date rather than a publication date, please clarify: "Last modified May 17, 2019". You may use both at your discretion, in which case you will need to distinguish between the two: "Published April 26, 2019; last modified May 17, 2019". If no date is available, use the source access date to obtain Data: "Accessed August 7, 2019". If the site is modified again to alter or delete the originally recovered data, you must add a note to that effect in the text or quotation, specifying if possible "as of [date]. "Web Source Examples in Chicago Style Footnote or Endnote (N): 1. Name Surname, A"title of the web page". A"name of the web site URL.. E-books are quoted just like printed books with a multimedia tag added at the end of the quotation. Kindle, PDF, EPUB, etc. Books consulted online are also quoted just like books, with the addition of a DOI (or URL) at the end of the quote. See also Books. Note: Stable page numbers are not always available in electronic format. Therefore, you can include the chapter number, section number, or other easily recognizable locator. Weston, t's Anthony. Essays on actions and events. Oxford: Clarendon, 2001. Online periodicals are quoted just like their printed counterparts with a DOI or URL added at the end of the quotation. See also Periodicals. It should also be borne in mind that while access dates are not required for formally published electronic sources, they may be useful for informally published electronic sources or may be required by some disciplines for all informally and formally published electronic sources. Access dates must be placed immediately before the DOI or URL. For four or more authors, list the first author in the note followed by et al. For the relevant bibliographical entry, list all authors (up to 10). N: 1. Kirsi Peltonen et al. A"Parental Violence and Adolescent Mental Health". Sometimes, you may need to quote a comment that someone made on a blog, an online article, a post on social media, etc. Generally, the comment will be quoted only as a note, not in the bibliography, unless there is some reason so it is felt that it should be considered a source in its own right, separate from the work to which it responded. The citation of a comment must contain only the name the commentator (and/or pseudonym, as above), the date on which the comment A was formulated (the timestamp A is optional) and a reference to work to which is responding. Online media should be quoted using the general format below. Note that if the title of work is to be written in italics or in Romans with varying quotation marks, from one stand to other, as noted at beginning of this page. For more guidelines on quoting videos, songs, and media in general, see Audiovisual recordings and other media content. N: 1. B: Surname, Creator's Name, Title of the job, Additional contributors, Editorial organization, Date of publication, Indication of format/average, execution time, URL. When quoting a podcast, set the title of the podcast in italics, and the title of episode (and the number, if included in the title of episode) in Romans in quotes. The release date must be inserted after the title of episode not before the media as shown below. Note: The inclusion of the word A"podcastA follows the same guidelines as inclusion of the word A"blogA above. A"Podcast, MP3A audio" is used below as a sample placeholder and would not be needed for this specific example. N: 1. Sean Cole and Ira Glass, A"622: Who Will You Call?".
